FAQs

When are Video Editing Services needed?

Video editing is crucial to produce professional, coherent, and engaging videos. Although there are some free video editing tools available, it can be a daunting, time-consuming task that requires creative, tech-savvy video editors, especially for high-volume content, multi-channel marketing campaigns, and educational content. Partnering with a professional video editing service provider saves you the hassle and time and guarantees premium-quality videos that increase your video ROI.

What is the difference between Transbridge video editing and post-production services?

Video editing can be considered as the initial phase of post-production services or can be requested as a standalone service depending on your demands and budget.

Video editing includes assembly of raw footage and/or organizing preliminary animation, cutting and trimming to improve the pacing and timing of the video, sequencing to ensure the narrative flows seamlessly, and inserting transitions to ensure a smooth flow of visuals and narrative.

Post-production includes additional steps and processes such as adding visual effects, motion graphics, color grading, and sound editing and mixing.

How much does video editing cost? And do you offer revisions?

We have different pricing packages customized to match your requirements and budget. Many aspects factor into pricing: for instance, whether you need video editing as a standalone service or would like to integrate it with other services such as post-production, subtitling, and voiceover.
